

Directors and Managers – Personal Liability for OHS

2007

Half Day Workshop

Directors and managers have extensive obligations and personal liability under OHS law. Recent cases show that directors and managers can, and will, be prosecuted for failure to comply with these obligations. This program considers the extent of these obligations and the steps that an organisation can take to minimise the personal liability of its directors and managers.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this program participants will:

- understand the legal framework and relevant OHS laws;
- have considered recent cases relating to personal liability of directors and managers;
- be aware of the defences that apply including due diligence;
- be able to identify steps to take to minimise liability of directors and managers;
- be aware of the position regarding insurance and indemnities for legal costs and penalties.

Designed for

Directors, managers and supervisors, safety professionals, human resource professionals, in-house counsel.
